This list gives sources of information in the U.S. Department of Agriculture and its various agencies. This list also includes names of the various Freedom of Information Act officers. For additional copies of this list, call 202/447-7454.

For Washington, D.C., sources, write or telephone the person in charge of information on the subject matter in which you are interested. When uncertain about the source, call the USDA Information Center on 202/447-2791. When writing, address the person by name and title, the name of the agency, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250. If you are calling long distance, the area code is 202 for Washington, D.C. All telephone numbers listed for field information offices are commercial numbers, not FTS.

Offices or individuals on the electronic mail network provided through computer time-share services of Dialcom Incorporated have the electronic mailbox identification following the telephone number. These mailbox IDs are on "57" computer system. If you are on a different Dialcom computer system, then place a "57:" before the mailbox ID. Those individuals on the electronic mail system provided by GTE Telemail are also noted.

Marketing U.S. Agriculture, the 1988 Yearbook of Agriculture, describes the revolution in the food marketing system caused by:

- New technology such as bar codes,
- Social changes such as smaller families, more women with jobs,
- Increased competition for world markets,
- Consumer concern about fat and other health issues,
- Demand for quality, freshness, convenience.

Individual marketers—of cranberry juice, potatoes, beef, turkey, chicken, almonds, ice cream, cotton, grain, soybeans and other products—tell their success stories to U.S. farmers and firms, focusing on four steps to marketing success: 1) Find out what consumers want, 2) Develop new or improved products, 3) Deliver them efficiently, and 4) Promote them to potential customers.

Marketing U.S. Agriculture is a 336-page hardcover anthology of 65 chapters written by experts from farms, industry, universities and government.

Limited free copies will be available from Members of Congress. Or order your copy for $9.50 from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. 20402-9325. International customers please add 25%. There is a 25% discount for bulk orders of over 100 copies sent to the same address. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has no copies for distribution.
